[Music] All right, welcome back to module four, the pain and confidence module. I'm excited because this one took a long time to make, but man is it freaking powerful. Every person I've shown this to that's helped me get feedback for iteration on this has been blown away by the clarity and the power of what you're about to get from this module. So, without further ado, let us dive in. What we're going to cover today is the significance of pain, how to generate pain in your audience, and then how to leverage that pain you generate to create the actions you want. As always, disclaimer. I highly recommend watching every previous module before you watch this one because we're going to build on the concepts we've already talked about. So, if you don't understand those well, it'll be harder and more complicated for you to get what we're going to go over today. But, if you do go through those previous modules, you will have an amazing foundation, which we can lay on some more structure to that foundation to make you a freaking money printing machine. So, let's dive in. First things first, the action equation. So, like we spoke about, you know, your job as a copywriter is to create action. You want to create these beliefs and create the actions in your audience. You want them to click on the the thumbnails. You want them to click on the email subject line. You want them to click the the call to action. You want them to watch the video. All those things are actions and we want to stimulate those in our audience. How do we do that? We do that by creating pain because pain fuels action. And we can visualize this with what I call the action equation. Let's take a look. We'll zoom in a little bit. On the left hand side, we have the pain of inaction minus the pain of action plus confidence in action gives us the chance of action. If that's a little bit confusing, do not worry. This whole module is breaking down this one equation. But basically what this means is if the pain of inaction is greater than the pain of taking the action and they're confident that that action will alleviate that pain, they'll take action. Very simple illustration. If you have your hand on the stove top and it's not on, meaning the pain of not moving your hand is not high because it's not hot. As you turn up the stove and it gets hotter and hotter and hotter, the pain of you doing nothing, meaning leaving your hand there gets great and the pain of you moving it, the energy it takes for you to just move your hand is super low. And you're confident that if you move your hand, it'll stop burning. So, what do you do? You move your hand. That is the first principle action equation. And we're going to tie this in to um copy all that good stuff. But just recognize this is why anyone would take any action. And when you understand that, you gain insight, you gain power. So right now, if you're have if you're having trouble persuading people, which means like if you're not making any money, then you this is your problem. This equation will show you what to fix by focusing on the pain. And if you want to become an effective copywriter, an effective entrepreneur, an effective marketer, whatever, you must become a master of pain. You must learn where pain comes from. You must learn how to create pain in your audience. You must learn how to leverage that pain into the

4. Pain-Confidence

specific actions you're looking for. And we're going to cover each of these in this module. This module is going to go in depth on this equation so you can become that master of pain and start creating the actions you want immediately. Warning, these concepts are powerful. If you're excited right now, you should be. But I want you to understand, by learning to create pain, you influence how someone acts. So, promise me, please promise me, you'll focus on creating productive pain. Meaning, pain that leads to someone creating positive change in their life. So pain can cause you to lose weight or pain could cause you to fall for a scam. And so you, the person that's creating the pain in your audience, it's your responsibility to do this wisely. Do not go out here and overpromise and scam and and do what's given this space such a bad rep already. Don't do those things. Use pain for good. When people hit rock bottom and they change their life, you realize what that is, right? It's this equation. Rock bottom is when someone's pain of not changing gets so great that they change. We want to create those painful scenarios. We want to fast forward and help someone hit rock bottom quickly before their life gets worse so that they change their life for the better. That's like losing weight. You heard of people who literally hit this certain number of weight or they look they look in the mirror one day and they just can't take it anymore and they drop like a 100 pounds over the next six months just like they just a switch flips. We want to create that in our audience to help them versus I remember back like about 15 years ago. My granddad almost fell for this phone scam because someone called him and said, "Hey, it's uh it my cousin I have a cousin named Amanda. Um she's awesome, but she was like in college at the time or something and someone called and said, "Hey, Amanda, you know, she's in college. She's in trouble. She needs you to send money to this account like right now." So what they did is they created pain my granddad to try to leverage that to get his money to scam him. But that's why they did it. They created pain. So by telling him this situation of like his granddaughter being in all this trouble and the only way to help her is if he sends money. They leveraged pain to create action. But it wasn't productive pain. It was pain that brings misery, that brings evil. Promise me you'll focus on using pain for good. Also, this applies to who you work for. If you are selling a product that you know is not morally in line with what you believe, brother, don't stop fooling yourself. Okay? If you're helping sell a product that brings misery to people, you realize you're you're playing a part. You're you're an accomplice. So, just want to put that out there. All right. With that out of the way, let us dig in. So, the first things is pain origins. Until we breathe our last breath or Jesus comes back, Lord willing, that happens before we all breathe our last breath, we're continuously in some form of pain. This is the curse of the fall of man. When Adam, the first human, disobeyed God for the first time, it created sin, separation from God. And part of that punishment is we're going to have to be in pain. We're going to have to work the land. And um girls have to go through the pain of child labor. So pain got introduced when sin came to the world. And because we're all sinners and in need of Jesus until we go to be with Jesus or until we breathe our last, we're always going to be in some form of pain. So highly recommend if you haven't seen the mindset module, go check it out. We talk about God and all this and go into detail with that. But just understand that everyone all the time is continuously in some form of pain. And while that may sound a bit weird and depressing, it isn't. Because just like we talked about a second ago, pain motivates us. Pain is why we work. It's why we set goals. It's why we create solutions. But understand that although we may be all experiencing some form of pain, we aren't always aware of that pain. And we don't always know what's causing that pain. So, right now, I'm recording this module. I am in flow state. I'm being careful to choose my words carefully. I'm trying not to say like and um and stutter and do all this. I'm trying to talk loudly and clearly. I'm so focused on my work, I'm dialed in that I'm not aware of whatever little pains I've got. Like for instance, my thumb is always cut. I don't feel it right now because I'm in flow state. I'm not I'm not aware of it. And so just because someone's in pain doesn't mean that they understand it and they're they're aware of it. And so our job as a copywriter is to bring awareness to the pain your audience is in. And then we're going to blame that pain on a specific problem that our product and service solves. In that second half, we'll go into detail in the next module in problem chains. But before you can blame that pain on a problem, you need to figure out how to bring awareness to the pain. And this is also why we love distracting ourselves from life and from work. Think about why you play video games and stuff is most of the time you're trying to escape the feeling of pain from not doing enough work or the feeling of pain from your life not going how you want it to. This is why we have, you know, ignorance is bliss and flow state and doom scrolling. People are considered to be the happiest they are in their life when they're in flow state because they're distracted from the pains that's going on around them and they're actively usually working to solve some sort of pain. So, not only are you like distracted from your current pain, but you're decreasing your future pain by working on the thing that that matters. So, it's like a double-edged sword versus uh doom scrolling or just like choosing to be ignorant. That's kind of just ignoring the pain and doing nothing about it and just distracting yourself. And so because everyone is in this state, we have to help them bring awareness to their pain and start taking the action that's going to better their life. And like I said, remember we're doing this to help people change for the better. Positive pain. This is a good thing. Um here's an amazing message that I got from Jovin a couple months ago. Uh one of the one of the guys in CE and he's talking about the pain of investment. And because he invested his time and money in Copy Elite, he started taking massive action like he never had before. He started doing harder work sessions in accomplishing harder things because that pain was there. Um he's saying if he spent $200 or even a thousand, he wouldn't have procras-

4. Pain-Confidence

he would have procrastinated and not taken action on sending outreach, not making his offer. So, because he went through the pain of committing and investing and taking the time and being part of his community, I mean, you guys have seen his wins post. It's been awesome. So, shout out to you, Joan. But that's our job here. We're trying to create scenarios like this, to use pain to better someone's life, not destroy it. So, let's talk about that. The first step to creating pain is by understanding where pain comes from. The pain origins. And these are kind of like the pre-coded things in our brains and bodies that signal pain. This is what God has kind of coded us to strive for. And so when whenever we don't have these things, pain happens. Why? Because we need these things. That's how we're we're programmed. And this can be explained from Maslo's hierarchy of needs. This explains what our core desires are. And when these core desires aren't being met, that is when we feel pain. So, let's start from the bottom. Number one, physiological needs. Also, do you guys like this? This took me so long to make. This took me so long to make this diagram, but dude, I think it was worth it. It looks cooler than the ones I found on Google. Anyways, side note. Um, starting from the bottom, physiological needs. These are the things that we need to survive. This is just like staying alive, right? So number one, staying alive, physiological needs, air, water, food, shelter, sleep, clothing, reproduction. This is like our kind of like the monkey brain, the very very core monkey brain. We need air, water, food. We want to sleep, we need clothes, and we need to reproduce. So that's like the base core needs. Um, and what we'll talk about is you usually start from the bottom and work your way up. And so if you're starving to death, you're not worried about self-actualization. You're not worried about status or recognition. You're literally starving. All you care about is finding a stake. And so that's kind of how this this hierarchy works is you start from the bottom and work your way up. The second one is safety needs. So once you're, you know, you have your air, water, food, you're surviving. Now you want to feel safe. You want to be free from fear and danger. So like security, you want to have employment. This is why people like jobs. They feel safe. Is a job safer than entrepreneurship? I could argue not really because now you don't have any real skills for the most part. And if you get fired automatically, what are you going to do? But they feel safe. And so by having that feeling of safety, it's valuable because they feel less pain because they feel stable at a job where they don't have to think for themselves. Not everybody's cut out for this game. I'm going to be straight up. In fact, most people are not. Most people are meant to be employees. There's nothing wrong with that. It's only wrong if you're if you're the person who has that entrepreneurial gift that God has programmed you with and you're not using it or you're not trying to use it. You're ignoring it. But most people like that safety of employment. One of the coolest feelings that I've had in the past year is hitting this point where I realize, you know what, if I lost everything, I have all these skills where I feel like I could make at least 10K a month by the end of the year doing anything. Like, if you just put me in the middle of anything based off the skills and how I've learned how to learn and my communications and all this stuff, I feel like I could be back at six figures a year. And that just level like security in that it just feels amazing some safety. But most of the time we're talking about um physical safety like fear from actual danger. Uh so once you have food and stuff like you want to have security. So this is a lot of people in like lower uh lower progressed count. Someone got mad at me for saying third world countries the other day. But anyway, that's how I explain it. In third world countries where they're having war and stuff. This is a huge deal. So once they have food, like they want to be safe. They want safety from this warfare. So that's a big one. Next is sexual companionship, significant other. Um this kind of goes into love and belonging. So friendship, intimacy, family. Number three and four are kind of in the same exact level here. So three and four come from this yellow level, which is you want to have a relationship, a significant other. Then you want to have love and belonging. You want to feel like you're part of a community. You want to have friends. You want to have intimate relationships. You want to have family. A sense of connection and belonging in a community. Yeah. So that's number three and four. Number five is status and respect. This is probably like the biggest one that you're going to target with most of your copy. Most of you with all your copy will be targeting status and respect to some extent, especially if you're in like the entrepreneurship space, you know, coaching, whatever. That's a big one. Um, so this is like respect for yourself, self-esteem, the status you have in the world, your recognition, your strength. Um, being able to provide for yourself. Yeah. Superiority. You want to feel like the best. You want to feel like the winner, superior to everyone else. Um, it's that it's the pride, you know, the pride that we're our sinful nature loves so much and we try to avoid. Number six, fulfillment of purpose. Self-actualization. Um, this is the desire to be the most that one can be. So, to fulfill the purpose, I believe this is directly. I mean, there's a reason God programmed in this this into us. It's because he has a purpose for you and for me. He's given us specific gifts that we are supposed to use to serve God and to serve people, to expand his kingdom, to tell others about Jesus. There's a reason I started this offer. It's because I was gaining all of these things, but I wasn't gaining this one. I was helping other people who had a lot of money make more money. Instead, I wanted to tell people about God through the gifts he's given me, through my ability to teach, and through my love for teaching and communication and community that we have in copy lead. I just this is yeah this is mine. It's like once you have all these things you start worrying about you know what what is my purpose? What is my self-actualization? All this stuff. This is also why you see people they hit 10K a month and they have like a crisis because they realize like they were trying to solve all this. They hit 10K a month and they're like frick now what? Why am I doing this? Like what's going on? Like what what's the point of all this? What's the point of this money? All this. they go through another breakdown because they realize that there's a whole another level that they need to solve now. Um, and shout out to the real ones who solve this before you hit 10K a month. That's that's the way to go. But anyways, this is where our pain comes from. And so, like I said, pain can be traced back to one or or more of these desires missing or being in question, being compromised. And so when your esteem, when your status is being compromised or you have no status, you feel pain. When you don't have love or maybe your relationships is in question, your love is in question. You feel pain. You want to do something about it. And like I said, it usually starts from number one and works its way up the pyramid. So, you go from staying alive to freedom from fear and danger to sexual companionship to social approval, belonging to status, to purpose, and then enjoying food and drink. I forgot about this one. Um, it's funny because this is a this is a core part of humanity is we like to enjoy food and drink. It just is what it is. There's not many people who would prefer to eat bad tasting food over good tasting food given the similar circumstances. So, this is a core drive. We want to have food and drink that tastes good. And this can kind of go in any any spot. Like this doesn't really follow an order. Um staying alive is always like number one, but after that it's like you could have good food there, you have good food later after you get a girlfriend. I mean it it's kind of just there all the time. All right. Once an origin is solved for you, you usually want to solve it for your family usually. So, like if you're starving, once you solve that, before you go and solve, you know, your your status and respect, you probably want to help your family. And so, this is a really important thing to to understand because someone could be doing something to solve the pain that their family is feeling from one of these. Really, really important. Listen to that again if you missed that. Once a pain origin is solved for yourself, you usually want to solve it for your family, especially when it's one of these bottom ones. Like if your family is dying, you want to help them get food quick. Um, yeah, makes sense. And most people do not realize the origin of their pain. They aren't aware of it. They just feel bad and they just blame that bad on on problems. So, for example, when you guys came to me to join Copy Elite, you probably weren't like, "Oh, KJ, I just can't seem to become the the person I want to be the most." or KJ, I just need to regain this feeling of strength and self-esteem I have in myself. No, what did you tell me? You said, I need money, KJ. I need money. So, you verbalize this pain origin as needing money. You think money is going to give you these things because money does bring a lot of these things. Money does help you have cover your physiological needs, cover your safety needs. You think it'll help you, you know, have status and respect and belonging. And so you tie these origins into one problem being I need money. Money can solve money problems, but it can't solve all your problems. And that's referring straight to this. Some of these things money can help with. Some of them it cannot. In fact, it might hurt. So keep in mind, people don't realize the origin. That's why we have to tie it around a problem or we have to meet them at their awareness level. We'll talk about that in detail next modules. But an example is whenever you're doing a sales call and you hear like, "Oh, my life sucks or my business sucks." But they can't they don't they can't verbalize what suck means. Like what does that actually mean? You've got to dig it out of them and help them become aware of why they're in pain. So someone says, "Oh, I hate being in college." It's like, "Well, why do you hate being in college?" It all comes back to this. Is it because you're you feel like you're not living your purpose in college? Is it because you don't have a sense of connection with the people who are in college, you don't have the same like think about it, you guys who are in this community, how alike we feel and how funny it is to talk about how similar we are compared to how different we are to the entire rest of the world out there. You didn't have that that connection in college. I know I didn't. I didn't know a single entrepreneur in college. It was me. I felt like it was me against the world and I was just crazy. So that's why college quote unquote sucks. It's because of these. And so you want to dig that out of them. And if you understand why they feel that way, you have all this leverage to create insane amounts of pain that they didn't even know where it was coming from or that it existed. And so like I said earlier, your job as a copywriter is to bring awareness to the pain your audience is in and then blame that pain on a specific problem that your product and service solves. Once again, we'll go over the second half in next module, but for now, how do we bring awareness? How do we cause the pain? Let's jump in. This is where things get tactical. So the first step is increasing the pain of inaction. So this is like the traditional thought. Whenever you hear increasing pain, this is what you're probably thinking about, which is making their life seem sucky. How do you make it feel like where they're at is just terrible and they need to change. So like if you're, you know, follow some some of other people's teaching where they talked about there's three closes, right? You sell people on changing. You sell them on your method. Then you sell them on your product which fulfills the method. This is the first step. So selling them on change. If they don't think their life sucks, why would they want to change anything? They wouldn't. And that's not that's not binary. That's a spectrum. Just like when people are about to lose weight, they didn't want to lose weight all the way up from like 150 to 160, 17, 180, whatever. And then as soon as they got to 250, they saw that number. They're just like, I can't I can't do this anymore. I have to change. That pain was building the whole time, but there's a threshold that it hits where like it's it's larger than the pain of action. Um, so what we have to do first is increase the pain they feel right now. This is like the stove top example. So in this example, this is you cranking up the heat on the stove to where they want to change. And so by create by increasing the pain of inaction, meaning the pain of doing nothing and things getting worse, you increase the pressure they feel to take action and solve the problem. So your goal is to increase the pain they feel about the problem they have,

increasing the pain they feel from doing nothing. Once again, you're selling them on changing. They need to change. Now, we do this by leveraging the work you've already done in module one, specific conditions. So, this should be so easy now that you've already done the hard work of figuring out what situations your audience is in and what's what problems do they have. So, we can create pain using positive or negative emotions. You might think, "Oh, well, a positive emotion, how does that create pain?" You'll see in a second. Pain can be caused by just needing to escape. Like, pain is needing to to change something, to escape your current situation. And we can do that in a positive or negative way. Now, negative emotions are naturally more powerful, but when they're overused, they come across as more pushy and fear-mongery. Um, so be careful using too many negative emotions. It can it can cause like this this bad taste in your audience's mouth from your messages and it can come across as kind of a little pushy, a little scammy, a little fear-mongering. So, just, you know, use it tastefully, but it is very powerful. So, let's go over a positive angle. So, a positive angle would be talking about the dream situation your audience has. So, what do they want to be at? What is the mountain top? What is the vacation? How do you sell them the vacation? And extremely importantly, how do they want to feel when that's happening? By talking about how they're going to feel, that's what brings up the emotions. times 10. So, if I just say, you know, oh, you wake up and you have three clients. It's like that doesn't bring a whole lot of emotion to you. There's a stretch that you have to take on your own versus if I say you wake up and you open up your laptop and you see that stripe screenshot of you just got a $1,500 in uh from your second client of this month. And the feeling of accomplishment just rushes over you because you know you'll be able to not only pay your rent but save an extra $500 a month which you could use to help your family. And they'll finally see you as that person who's the the provider and you're just content with the man that you've become. Do you feel how different that is? Way different. But notice as soon as I said that, what probably happened? Pain. Because you're not there yet. So by creating a larger gap for making the vacation seems so wonderful and the dream life seems so great, pain is created because you're not there. Why do you think the meta for selling info has been the same for the past 10 years? Right? show you a massive Lamborghini and how dope my life is and how everything in my life is great and I'm rich and I buy watches and and yeah, you're poor buy my thing which tells you how to get these Lamborghinis because they're using this angle by showing you how amazing their life is or quote unquote how how much amazing it seems in a in a 10-minute video. You feel pain and they don't even have to do it. You know what I'm saying? like they're just showing you how quote unquote great their life is and that creates pain which causes you to book a call through their funnel and buy their program. That's exactly how it works. It's a positive angle. So I consider this running to the light. So this is like running towards something. This is what this pain causes.

4. Pain-Confidence

Negative angle. This is where you use a nightmare situation and how they hate to feel and they feel pain from being stuck there. So by bringing their attention to their sucky past, present or future situation and how bad they felt, they feel right now or they will feel if they don't change, they feel pain. So if I talk about, hey, you know, this because you don't have a proven outreach system is why you're continually sending outreach after outreach, hating your life, procrastinating every day because deep down you know these lowquality outreaches are not going to work. You've already sent a thousand and you're sitting here wondering if this is all worth it. Are you destined for this path or are you just another failure? Are you going to sit here and let other people sign client after client after client while you're sitting here sending these DMs that you just know are not going to work and you're wasting time and you don't even know if you'll be able to pull this off, if you'll be able to make enough money online to do this full-time. You don't know if you'll live up to your purpose and you feel ashamed. You don't feel good enough. You feel like you're just another average person like the world expected you to be. Yeah, that's painful, right? Like that's what I'm saying. Like, oh man, the negative part is is powerful, but you got to be careful, man. I once again, use this for posit use this for a a positive action, but be careful creating negative pain because it's powerful. It hurts. And there's a classic study done where I might be butchering it, but basically what happens is if you ask someone if they'll walk two miles and get to get 20 bucks, they'll be like, "Ah, I'm good." But if you tell them they dropped 20 bucks, two miles back, they'll walk to go get it. Because people don't like loss. They don't like the negative stuff. And so negative can be more more beneficial than positive. It's the same thing, right, that you you're gaining $20 than you than you were in this current moment, but because it's it's negative, you don't want to lose. It's more powerful. You go do it. You take action. So, just be careful. Let's go over some examples to show you what this looks like. So, any anytime you're creating pain, it can be positive or negative, and you can choose. Let's go over just some really basic examples. I just don't don't judge me for these. I just spun these up in like five minutes um using some examples from other copy and just Yeah. But let's go over fitness. So let's say copy this stepbystep calisthenic system to unlock skills that make people look at you like you're a famous athlete in only 3 to six months. So here, what are we doing? Unlocking skills that what? Make people look at you like a famous athlete. What are we what are we targeting here? We're targeting some status, right? Notice how they're doing that. Um, but this is painting a a dream outcome. And because you don't have skills and you people don't look at you like a famous athlete, you feel pain from this. First is the negative approach. Copy this system and say goodbye to the embarrassment of looking, feeling, and being frail. So this is kind of actually positive by saying say goodbye, but you get the point. To the embarrassment of looking, feeling, and being frail. So on the positive angle, we're going towards how they feel when they're when they're the beast.

4. Pain-Confidence

Here we're targeting how they feel right now. The pain of looking and feeling and being afraid. Notice how we're talking about the feeling, the embarrassment, how they they feel that it's a situation that they're like going back to in their mind. All right, let's take a look at ecom. Once you know the one secret to finding a high quality product for your store, you'll unlock what feels like an infinite money glitch. Here we're talking about a feeling that they kind of imagined from their video game era. Feeling the rush of each ch-ching, knowing you're one step closer to living life completely free. Notice what what I did here is I'm talking about freedom and and purpose, self-actualization, and they inherently kind of think about status during this. So, that's positive. Let's look at negative. Without knowing the one secret to finding a high quality product for your store, you will stay broke forever. Never escaping the dreadful feeling I have to clock in to work on Monday. So here it's a nightmare scenario that they're stuck in and then this terri we're bringing attention awareness to this awful feeling um that they've experienced of having to clock back in. It's just like oh man I hate that terrible feeling. Um here's a really simple example with YouTube titles. So look at how you can do positive or negative. So the the five habits of the top 1% men or the five habits keeping men weak. the same exact content, just positive versus negative. And uh we'll go over examples later in this module of a lot more of how to create pain. So if you don't want 100% get it yet, don't worry. But just just know that it's a you talk about a dream situation plus how they want to feel about it and they feel pain from not being there. Or you talk about a nightmare situation and how they hate feeling about it. I just messed up that diagram. I just realized it's supposed to be a negative. Um and the pain they feel from being stuck there. So dream situation, how they want to feel, nightmare situation, how they hate feeling, you're going to bring up pain. Now, how potent this is 100% depends on how well you've done the earlier modules. So, it's all about specific conditions. It's all about general conditions. It's all about the liking, relatability. Are you using language that they that they um freak with? Are you are you going over situations that they're actually in that are actually painful to them? That's what makes this powerful. This is just like another framework. But this is why I have to teach this course in full because like none of this none of these things are going to save you on their own. But by having understanding of all of these things, that's when you become powerful a full stack marketer. So bonus tech is storytelling. So this is kind of how you can do the same thing but using your own story. This is really good for personal brands and for stuff like that. By telling the story of how you went from their painful situation, so this one up here, to the dream outcome, which is this one, they kind of live through you and they feel the same emotions that you felt because it's so similar to their story. You indirectly bring awareness to their pain. So they imagine themselves in your shoes and they want to do slash buy slashtake the action that you took to get your results. And the reason why this works is when you nail your past scenario sounds exactly like their past scenario. So if they're listening to your story and they're like, "Dude, that is me right now. What the heck? I'm in that same scenario. I feel the same way you feel. I'm going through the same struggles and then they hear about you solving all that problem and getting the outcome that they want. They want to follow in your footsteps and do whatever it is that you did do to do that. So, like I said, this works for every form of traffic, but specifically powerful when the product or service you're selling is attached to a person or personal brand. This doesn't mean organic content. I just mean a personal brand. So, even if you're running cold ads or something like that and there's someone selling it, like it's not just like an ecom brand, like there's actually a face behind the person who's selling it, this can be extremely powerful using story selling. So a good example is our current um like our current low awareness funnel right now. So this is for people from my raw channel who have no idea what copyrightiting is. We send them to this page where it's a story selling. Now eventually we will we were not going to use this in the future but we had to do this for right now. So it's a great example. I'll scroll through it real quick. Basically you see me I'm talking about how I felt pain. I had one goal and because I wasn't you know I wasn't hitting this goal I felt pain. So, I talked about how it sucks. I tried and failed it. All these things suck. Then I saw this one thing, this one skill. Um, I talked about feeling pain. I didn't make any money. I was I considered getting another job to get my wife out of the apartment we were stuck in. But I discovered the most valuable skill, which is copyrightiting. And I'll talk about my journey of achieving my dream outcome. So, here you you know, you have my plan. Then, boom, the dream outcome. I hit 10K a month. Whoa, it was crazy. I helped other people do 10K a month. I did, you know, 60K a month. insane, insane. All from learning copyrightiting. Here's some crazy results from our students. Um, so you see how I'm using the story from my example to bring them through the journey that they want to go on. Um, so like I said, it's really good for people who are less aware of what you're doing. So like I wouldn't give this funnel to my main channel because they're already sold on copyrightiting. They don't need to be sold on copyrighting. They need to be sold on copy lead and like the outreach systems and like the principles we teach in this program. So anyways, you get the point. Um, also writing B TOC VSSLs. This module is kind of like a storytelling master class. So feel free to go through that inside the high ticket course. This one's great. So go check that out if you want more on that. Yeah, storytelling can be a good way to do the negative and positive angle in a very like low-key indirect way. Now, like I mentioned earlier, it's vitally important. Do not forget everything you've learned so far. The amount of pain that you're able to create depends on how well you understand and use specific conditions, general conditions, and the variables of likeness. If you can't do those three things, you're going to be shooting in the dark creating pain. So, once you know those and you have these frameworks and you understand the origins, all of a sudden, you can just you can create insane

amounts of pain almost effortlessly. But once again, if you talk about situations and feelings that don't match what your audience wants to feel, you won't create pain. Specific conditions are everything. If you're selling a workout program and you're targeting people who want to lose weight, but your audience is all about people who want to bulk up and they're tired of being skinny, then you talk about situations of them feeling overweight doesn't match your audience. They're not going to feel pain because they've not gone through that. And so it all depends on specific conditions. Also, the more you nail the variables of likeness when you're creating pain, the more confidence they have that you'll solve that pain later. So you probably got you guys probably won't get this till you watch this module again for the second and third time, but when we go over confidence later, the more specific and the more relatable and perfect you nailed their pains, the more confidence that they have as well. So, not only are you creating pain, but you're creating confidence because they're like, "Wow, this guy has been through what I've been through. He knows it. And if he figured it out, I have confidence he'll help me with it because he understands it so well. It's so in detail to what I'm exactly feeling." And that comes from nailing the variables of likeness and being specific. Um, we can also increase the pain of inaction by pushing the big FOMO general condition. So what we talked about in general conditions using big and FOMO, they feel this pain of staying still. The pain of not taking action is great. When something feels big and FOMO like you you got to take you got to take action now because you don't want to wait. It could you could miss it. So the pain of doing nothing increases when you use this general condition. Also by using urgency and scarcity. So that that'll be covered in the urgency scarcity module in detail. But urgency and scarcity is huge when it comes to putting the cherry on top to the pain of an action. Cool. We'll cover that in detail later. Now, decreasing pain of action. So once again, you can't just increase the pain of inaction. You want to decrease the pain of action. So if it's super painful, like the reason people don't lose weight is because it's hard, right? It's not that they don't feel a lot of pain for being fat. Of course, they feel pain for being fat. Who doesn't? You know what I'm saying? But the pain of getting unfat is too great. So, they do nothing. That's why they don't take action. But if you give if you gave every single fat person a big red button that says lose 50 pounds and all they had to do is press it, guess what? Every one of them is pressing it. I don't care what what they're coping and saying. Anyone who's trying to be like, "Oh yeah, being fat is like cool, brother." No, it's not. It's not healthy for you. It's not honoring God with your body. And trust me, this is coming from someone who weighed close to 200 lb. And I'm a short dude. Uh I was not healthy. I'm not going to put up a picture, but you can just imagine it if you really want to, if you want to create pain for yourself right now. It's all about decreasing the pain of action. And so if you make it easy as possible, if they push a button and they get this outcome, they lose the the uh the pounds, they they make the money,

4. Pain-Confidence

guess what? They'll take the action. This is how a lot of people sell info, right? Is they make all these videos and stuff showing telling you that, "Oh, dude, it's so easy. If you just write three emails, you know, using AI, if you just use a AI to build you an online product and sell it, dude, you'll make 10K a month in like two weeks." They make it seem like it's a push button when in reality it's just a lot harder than that. Um, but what does that do? It creates the the energy in you to take action because you're like, "Dude, yeah, let me do that." And so once again, this is an equation here. The lower you can get this, the higher chance you're going to take action. So by by decreasing the perceived pain of taking the action you want, the more likely they are to take action. This is done by following the previous text and subtext module. So we covered this in detail in text and subtext. This is by using general and specific conditions to push the new easy safe emotions. By pushing these emotions, this is what they do. This is why they work. If something seems new, it seems like it's going to work. There's less pain of action. It's brand new. It's it's it's like it's new tech. You just have this hope which decreases the pain of action. When something seems easy, it literally is decreasing the pain of action. Like if something's hard versus easy, you're more likely to take the easier option because there's less pain involved, right? Same with safe. Safe says, "Hey, that's a terrible that's a weird little thing there. Safe implies um that I can crack myself up 40 minutes into these modules, man. I'm telling you. safe implies that there's going to be less pain in the future of of like risk and so there's less pain of action. So you're decreasing the perceived pain of taking that action. Making the action seem easy, simple, fast, painless. It's very simple. Just make it easy for them to take the action you want. Um I kicked up my email list the other day because I've been busy doing this stuff. I haven't been sending emails. Um and I wanted to re-engage people, like re-engage the list. And so what I did was I simply sent an email saying, "Hey, you know, I want to I want to start making some new master classes on YouTube for you guys. What do you want to see?" But I didn't say it like that. I said, "Shoot, just shoot me a quick reply." So made it seem easy um with any suggestions you might think of. And then I gave them examples. I said, "Funnel building, emails, you know, I don't know what I said, AI, like sales pages." I gave them all these examples. Why? to make it brain deadad easy where they don't even have to think of the options. They just look at the list and pick one, type it, and it's good to go. And I kid you not, I had three full pages of responses of people telling me what they wanted. And almost all of them, almost all of them were something from the list that I gave. How crazy is that? So, because it was easier to just pick one of the examples instead of think of their own, they took the action. So, I got the action I wanted by making it easy for them. This is one small scenario, but when your whole funnel is full of these, that's when things get get interesting. So, like I said, we'll cover some examples of this um coming up in in in the future, but this is really like you've already done the work of this. It's all about making these easy, simple, fast, painless, new,

4. Pain-Confidence

easy, safe, using that text and subtext module to make things easy. Now, creating confidence. This is important. So if you've done your job well so far, you've increased the pain they feel from not taking the action. You've decreased the pain they feel around taking the action. So now they feel bad for not changing and change seems easy. So now they really want to change now. It should be super easy for them to take action. But all that's left is to increase their confidence that if they take the action, it will alleviate that pain. And so if I make someone's life seem like hell because they don't know copyrighting or they don't have an outreach system and I show them how easy it is for them to win if they had a proven outreach system for copywriters. What if they don't believe that that that would work? What if they're like, "Okay, yeah, it might it might work, but like not for me. I'm from wherever. I'm from this or I have this problem." Well, they're not going to take action. And so not only you have to create the pain, you have to create confidence that if they take that action, it will alleviate that pain. It will work. What's the percentage that when if they do this, they will get the outcome. So let's go over that. Phase one, creating confidence in you slash your client you're writing for. Now, this is incredibly important when your product or service is tied to a a personal brand. So when it's tied to someone's face where you're not just a brand like you're it's a brand and someone's face. This is incredibly important. Um and this is done throughout the whole marketing funnel but it's usually emphasized at top of funnel. And so this was pretty much everything we covered in last module from the the variables of likeness to create confidence to create trust in you and what you say you have to use the 11 variables of likeness. We have a whole you know almost two-hour module on this. So, I'm not going to go into detail here, but go through that. That's what creates confidence in you, in your client. Also, like I said, specificity in the pain. So, this is covered in 11 variables like this, but I kind of want to like highlight it here. If I talk about the exact scenario that you're in watching this video, like to the tea, exactly what you're going through every day, how you feel, you have confidence in me that, wow, okay, this guy can help me because man, he seems like he's gone through exactly what I'm going through and he solved it. So, by being so specific, that creates confidence. Really cool. So, be specific when you're bringing up those pains. Be specific of the scenarios. Be specific of how they feel. Cool. Um, phase two, creating confidence in themselves. So, once they're confident in your ability to help them, which is honestly kind of the easy part, um, after you've been doing this for a year, it's kind of easy to create confidence in you. The hard part is they need to be confident that they can do their part to get the desired outcome. They need to believe in themselves. Also, this ties right back into the pain of action. And so if you're selling something where it requires a lot of effort on their part, like a coaching program, like um like just working out, anything where where someone else has to put in a lot of effort, you have to create a lot of confidence in them. And the higher that the higher the pain of action is, the more

4. Pain-Confidence

confidence you're going to have to create in themselves. So a good example would be, you know, meditation versus anxiety meds. So they both help do the same thing, right? I can tell you from someone who meditated for over frick, I think it was like 10,000 minutes or something. I don't know. I had a huge log of meditation. It does help. It lowers anxiety. It gives you a clear mind. It helps you to just be more grounded and to stop anxious thoughts. Same thing anxiety meds do. But what's the problem? It requires a lot of effort. Meditation sucks mentally. Like it's hard to sit down. It's hard to avoid distractions. It's hard to continue like focus on your breath. All this good stuff versus popping a pill is nothing. All you do is swallow, right? So that requires geez it requires a lot less effort for anxiety meds versus meditation which is why anxiety meds are billions of dollar industry trillions is because the value is because it doesn't require a lot to do. You just you just pop it and then it works. Also another one could be weight loss coaching versus fat loss pills. And so someone might not have to believe in themself to buy some pills. It's easy. You don't have to have that much confidence in yourself. You just eat the pill. Versus if you're going to have someone coach you through weight loss, they got to believe in themself to some extent because they're going to be doing some sort of work, a lot more effort, like months of effort versus just 5 seconds of just swallowing a pill. So how do we do this? How do we create confidence in themselves? The first step is to write down every reason why. This should take you like days to do that. You should spend a lot of time doing this, especially whenever you're creating your offer. Um, make sure you've seen like the offer master class that just came out um recently from the other coaching call. But write down every every single reason why someone would not be able to succeed with your product or service. Add this to your conditions deck. Use use your specific conditions. So if I'm selling like a you know a YouTube course and someone says well I um I'm ugly or something. Write that down. That's a that's a reason. Or they say oh I'm I'm not good to on at speaking to camera or I don't have a good camera or I don't have a good microphone or uh I don't do like you need to write down every single reason why someone doesn't believe in themselves. Then all you do is disprove those beliefs somewhere in your marketing or copy. And we do this using logical arguments, case studies, testimonials, personal stories, etc. So simple example, you don't have to go crazy with this guys. As long as you cover if you cover all the main ones that your audience is believing, you're going to create all this confidence in them by addressing those false beliefs. And don't get lazy here. Don't just say like, "Oh, well, they should just, you know, believe in themselves." Well, I good luck making less. I mean, have fun making less money, brother. You got to do the work for them. Help them. Show them their like why their false beliefs are false. Once again, make sure these things are true. Like, don't just do this to to lie and scam people. But false belief. I'm not a natural writer, so I won't make any money with copyrightiting. It's a valid false belief some people might have. So, these are not real things. I just gave an example here of these things, but you could say 87% of our most successful students claimed to be bad at traditional writing, which is honestly a lot of a lot of people in copy who've won the most stuff were people who suck at English. So like this is sort of true, but the stat is not 100% accurate. Um, most of our students claim to be bad at traditional writing in school with most of them averaging a C plus in English. Yet now some of them make anywhere from 40 to 150k a year writing sales copy online. You could talk about like a stat. You could show a testimonial of someone who overcame that that same belief. And so um one of the one of the most epic interviews we have is with Griff. Griff actually joined Copy Elite but because he still had false belief in himself he quit. He's just like ah it's just too hard. I'm not I'm not good enough for this. He quit. Played video games for two months until his pain of inaction got great. He came back locked in and signed like a 4K a month client literally within 15 outreaches all because he overcame that false belief. And now he has that false belief is like gone out of his head. He doesn't even question that anymore. And so by him sharing his testimony of him overcoming that, it helps someone else overcome that same thing. Personal story of how you failed English class and then you went on to make 10K a month writing copy. Dude, my English teachers hated me, bro. I hated writing. I'm not Dude, every English paper was like a dagger to my heart. I hate that junk. Um, and so I could tell my story and that would encourage someone to let go of this false belief. And so if you do this in your marketing for all the biggest false belief your audience has, you're creating confidence in themselves. Um, lastly, you can just use logic. This is like a favorite for me. It's like, hey, look, copyrightiting is nothing like writing like like the writing you did in school. That writing demands you to be boring, statistical, and long-winded as possible. Copyrightiting is the opposite. You get paid to write as short as possible, as punchy as possible, and you get to be creative and funny, all the while making more money than your English teacher with a fraction of the effort. Lol. Notice how like me writing this is like proof of this, right? It's it's hilarious. Um, so yeah, those are how you can just prove it. Like I said, get creative. Just think if you once had that false belief, what helped you overcome it? And how can you show that to your audience, people you're selling to? So, we created confidence in you. You've created confidence in them by addressing their like most three to five biggest false beliefs. And then, you know, make sure you have a list of all of them, but make sure you figure out which ones are the most true of most your audience, right? Same thing with specific conditions. Like, this is just another specific condition. Um, awesome. And then address that using, you know, logical arguments, case studies, testimonials, personal stories, proof, etc., charts, whatever, you know, stats, all that good stuff. Phase three, creating confidence in the method, in your solution. So, for instance, if I create confidence in me, then I help you create confidence in yourself to do it. I want to make sure that you're confident in copyrightiting and you're confident in copy elite. I have to do those two things as well. And so this is like traditionally what you would think of creating confidence. So this is creating confidence in the opportunity, the mechanism, the method you sell and then your product, the thing that that uses that that method. So we do this number one by pushing the new and only emotion in your marketing. So if your thing sounds and looks and seems like every other thing that they've already tried and failed, guess what? They're not going to have much confidence in it. And so if you come along selling an agency offer like his like an agency coaching offer that's been sold a millions of times and it looks exactly like everyone else's offer like you just take Charlie Morgan's thing and you just rip it and you start running it. It's not new and only and so people are already going to have lower confidence in your thing. This is why they offer master class is so important. being creative and and figuring out how to angle what you do, your skills in the most converting way possible that's new and that is just like people want to to buy your stuff. Next is specificity in that pain. We talked about that earlier. When you're when you're adding specificity in the pain, they feel more confident in your solution. Next, testimonials and results. So, this is like the the simplest but most obvious answer, but it's still the most powerful. If you have a lot of results showing that you've done exactly what you're promising you can do, that creates confidence. And so, uh, on our copy lead page, we we have too many like the testimonials will break the page. So, we've had to figure out like how to just get the best ones. But, we have like an endless scroll of testimonials results. We used to have our on our sales page. You literally just endlessly. And what did that do? created a lot of confidence in you guys to buy copy elite because you're like wow frick it worked for literally literally so many people this is crazy. Um next no one really talks about this and I understand why because it's not the most important but it is extremely important. It's just not you got to have other things in order first and that is general excellence professionalism. And so having the best looking website doesn't matter when your offer sucks, your copy sucks, your VSSL sucks, you suck, it doesn't matter. But when you have all those other things in order, looking and and seeming professional and having this level of excellence to what you do, it adds confidence in you and your solution. Pretty cool. So like an example, look at these diagrams. There's no reason why I have to make these. Like I could just make them in muro, make them in paint, but I spend time making them in Photoshop custom. I do these I do all these by hand just so it adds this this level of excellence because I want to I want to serve you guys. I want to do as best as I can for y'all and you know that translates to just it being more valuable and you believing it more, meaning you get better results. Um, next clear, simple, and logical arguments spros chain. We we'll go over this in detail, but basically when your sales message just kind of feels like common sense and it just makes sense in their head. It just clicks and it's it's just logical. That creates confidence in your method and your solution. So if I say, "Hey man, you want to make money, right? You're in pain because you're broke." Well, guess what? The best way to make money isn't by copying a random business model that'll go out of business. It's by learning valuable skills by becoming irreplaceable with how good you are. And the most valuable skill you should learn is copyrighting because copyrighting is everything now online. Tell them that clear simple, right? Once you learn copyrighting from these free videos or whatever, now you need to have clients. And the best way to get clients is by having a bulletproof outreach system specifically built for copywriters, which you can find in Copy Elite. We host client competitions. We place you directly with clients every week. buy copy elite. Right? So, it's it's clear, it's simple, it's logical. And then honestly, I I'll probably iterate on that. It could probably be even even simpler, even more clear, but it needs to be just it needs to be so such a logical argument. Like there's an ads that were going around a while about this guy like offering um kind of like ACT prep and he he guarantees that he'll get you an offer from these top schools. So, it's a he runs ads to parents for coaching their kids on how to get into these big colleges and how to get scholarships. And so, it's just it's so logical. It's so simple. It's like, dude, you pay me 6K, I'll get you a $40,000 uh scholarship. And they're like, bet. And he doesn't have to sell people on college because people already want college. He's selling what people want. And so, it's you it's it's simple. That all comes from thinking through your problem chain and thinking through your offer and how you position what you do in the market. Um that that adds confidence in your solution by how simple it is. Next, proof and appealing to logic. This is like what normal people think of when they hear of creating confidence, but this is like a huge part of it. case studies showing what you've done. Demonstrations showing how your thing works, the process, like yeah, showing the process, the systems proof, testimonials from people who have been through your thing, who've got the result, quote from authority. So, like if you want to sell like your method, your thing that you're selling, and you have someone who's very high up in this space, very well respected, and they say something about how, you know, like if if Horoszi came out and was like, "Copywriting is the most valuable skill you should learn, you better believe I'd be quoting that sucker all day, every day, because people respect and trust Hormosi." And if he says something that aligns with my argument, I now get to borrow that trust. Uh, creating confidence. Next, visuals. People love visuals, bro. Anytime you see something in a chart, you're just like, "Yep, it's true because we just love charts and graphs." And you can uh you can kind of use data to show kind of what you want to show. Uh so visuals are really good as well. It also is just it's easier, right? It's easier on the eye. If I pull up the kai thing and you see there's me, you know, living my dream life. I did this on purpose. I used a visual to just help people see like I'm I'm literally doing it. I'm living the dream life because of this one skill. And using the visuals of testimonials and visuals from, you know, all this stuff. Yeah. Just using visuals is a great like if I just said, "Hey, I got 100K

4. Pain-Confidence

4. Pain-Confidence

views right after starting my channel." It wouldn't hit as hard as if I just showed the picture. Use a visual proof. Cool. Um, yeah. Next is like official studies and documents. So using like you know research paper and this is like a huge one for OG copyrighting but like using reports and things that are official that are trusted like the government stuff or by you know Harvard or some kind of study that aligns with what you're selling and the the opportunity you're selling. Um next risk reversal guarantees. This one's huge. So by creating you can create confidence by having a guarantee by saying hey uh you know I only get paid after you after these emails get you you know revenue or doing a revenue share. So I only get paid whenever you get paid or saying like you will you will you'll get an extra you know 50 50 leads a day from my copy or or your money back like that creates confidence. This is one of the the biggest ones you can use as a copywriter and what I used a ton, man, a ton to land my first clients. Every single one of them, I gave them like a crazy guarantee because I just I needed I needed clients. I wanted to get my foot in the game and I was like, you know what? If you don't like anything about this, even if you make money, if you just don't like me, if you don't like anything, you just say the word, you get your money back. I'm not saying you offer that because like if people are unethical, they will they just abuse that. But I was kind of ignorant and that's what I did. I just offered that and I trusted that people would be good act in good faith and and it worked for me. Um so just be careful with that though. But yeah, guarantees huge. That's huge for creating. I mean think about every single thing that has a guarantee. Like almost most everything has a guarantee whether you realize it or not. They put the guarantees there because it's just kind of like free confidence whenever you have a good product. Um when people don't have guarantees or they have shady guarantees, you should be you should be high alert um that it might not be a great product. Um yeah, be careful that in the info space. Nonetheless, uh lastly, this is really important, but the believability of your claims, you know, in the future, I can sell a program which like promises you to hit 100K a month if you follow this and do all these things, but the believability is just it's not there. You guys barely believe you can make 1K a month, you know? So, me selling something that that makes 100K is like what? But it all depends on who you're selling to. But if I was going to give that offer to people who had been in business for a while who were at 50k a month, then of course like it's believable. It sounds really believable. But just make sure that you're whoever you're selling to, it needs to sound believable. It needs to be believable. And that depends on specific conditions who you're selling to. So that is how you create confidence in you or your client, creating confidence in your audience, the p people you're selling to, then creating confidence in your method and your solution. Really cool. All right, last section. Becoming a master of pain. Like I said, if you master pain, man, everything's going to start swimming for you very quickly, especially built on the concepts we've already talked about and the ones you're going to learn in following modules. Um, and the best way to learn anything, including pain and confidence, is by the hyperlearning cycle. I'm going to say this and preach this until you guys get sick of me saying it because y'all ain't doing it still. And I don't know why. because this is the only way I learn anything. Like this is what's given me all my progress is the God's blessing and the hyperlearning cycle. So what do you do? I want to make this super tactical for you. First step is practice daily by writing copy that uses negative and positive angles to stir pain. Focus on being specific in the situations and using language that match your audience and brings emotions. So focus on matching how they want slash don't want to feel. And don't guys just please think about don't be like oh what do I write? I don't have anything to write for. Write freaking anything. Google literally use AI. Say hey I want 15 products that I could write some copy for. And then just try try to imagine yourself in the shoes of that audience. Just do it. You're going to suck. But the only way to not suck is to do it to do more of it. So freaking sit down every like I guys I did this when I first started. I would find random products online, random info products, and I would just start writing copy about it. Just writing about how the person would feel and being specific in those emotions. Number two, learn, which is learning from someone teaching how to do this, which is this module. So just re-watch this module. I don't know any I don't know anywhere better that's going to teach this. So just rewatch this module and the previous ones, okay? That's that's what you should do in your learning time per day. Three, study these examples. We'll go over these in a second. Um, break down great funnels and copy that you find using the same methods in this template. So, I'll show you what I'm talking about. We'll go over this live, how to break this down and break down at least one piece of copy every workday. So, find an email, a sales page, even a headline. I mean, frick anything, a YouTube video, intro, like, and just break it down. I would spend four hours a day doing this when I first started. I would watch Eman Godzi YouTube videos. I would pause it every three seconds and write down every word. I'm not joking. And you know how many people are like, "Dude, just use AI. Just use AI." I don't want the AI to know. I want to know. I want to know what he's doing, not the AI. So, I'm going to write down every freaking word until I understand why he's making so much money. And if you don't think like this, it's going to be so hard for you to get ahead. And I'm sorry I'm preaching right now, but some of y'all I know you need to hear this. You're an hour into this module and you need to take some freaking action and I'm going to preach until you do so that I can help you. Let me use this module right now. If you're sitting here wondering why you're not making progress every month, you keep learning stuff, but nothing's happening. Nothing's coming from your mind into the real world. Your situation is not changing. You're not getting new clients. You're not making any progress. People are still not respecting you. You still feel average. You got to take action. You got to do something. And you know, this comes straight back to to the Bible. Paul says that faith

4. Pain-Confidence

without works is dead. If you say you believe stuff, but you don't do actions that align with that, do you really believe it? No. Faith without works is dead. You have to have faith first. We're saved through faith in Jesus. But if you truly have faith, you would do the things that he says. None of us are going to be perfect. But it's all about doing more. In John, it says, "You will know my disciples because they'll they're the doers of the word." It says, "Don't just be hearers of the word, but be doers." And so that's spiritually, but you know, reality is is spiritually like reality is the Bible. And so copyrighting works the same way, bro. If you just sit here and hear this stuff, you don't do anything. You're not going to make you're not going to make any progress. So do this stuff, okay? Learn, rewatch the modules, study these examples. I want you to break down good copy every day. Every day. And number four is iterate. Sorry, sorry for the rant, guys, but like I don't know. I'm just feeling fired up and like energized and I want to I want to, you know, cause some productive pain here to help you change your life, man, because I know how freaking powerful this stuff is and how it radically changed my entire scenario, like everything. And it's it's all God. I thank God for it. Literally, I thank God for it every day. Uh, and I I should be more grateful. Um, but you know, I'm I'm I'm broken sinner just like the rest of us. But I thank God every day. Every day, man, for the situation I'm in right now. has nothing to do with revenue, by the way. Revenue is like lower this month than it's been in a while. But my life, like what I do every day, the fulfillment, the purpose that I feel in my life, the amount of people that these things are helping and like you guys are are just telling me how awesome this stuff is and how it's helping you, that's what matters. And I just, dude, I wouldn't I wouldn't trade it for freaking anything. I wouldn't trade it for $100 million. Uh I'm serious. This is dope. And I want you to feel that same purpose. But if you don't start taking some action every day, it's not going to work, man. You got to take action. So, do write some stuff. You're going to suck. You're not going to know what to do. That that's fine. Just do something. Just write something, man. Try to write something emotional. Learn rewatch this module. Study study these examples. We're just we're about to break them down right now. The number four, iterate. Um, so what I want to do is I want to do a study cycle together live. So, obviously I'm I can't write for you. you're gonna have to go and write. And until you just sit down and do it, there's nothing I can tell you. You just you just got to do it. Learn. This is what you're doing. You're learning right now. But what I can help you do is I can help you study to kind of show you some examples. So, what I've done here is I've got I've got some examples here. Let me uh wake my mouse back up, then we'll get into this. All right. What we're going to do is I want to take you through a study cycle live of how we break down copy looking for these exact concepts we just went over. So this will be linked under the school module or or inside this um Google doc be linked right here. What you can do is I want you to make a copy of this first. Let's go to board and duplicate so that we can actually draw on it for yourself. This is in Muro

4. Pain-Confidence

by the way. If you don't have a Muro account then bro what are you doing? Make a Muro account. Best thing ever. Um we'll duplicate this. And what I'm going to do is you know I've given you a lot of examples here for you to check out. Just some basic copy. Um, this is not my stuff. This is I just got this from others. So, check it out. It's good stuff. Uh, we got some Iman Gazi. We got some Russell Brunson. Just people that you'd be uh aware of. Then I just took some random bullets from a lot of different sales pages that I like. And what I want you to do is you're going to break these down. Um, after we go through a cycle live, also I've got 200 plus examples of copy coming in the synthesis module. These are just to give you guys like a primer of of how you should break this down. So, if you're looking for more stuff, don't worry. Synthesis module will have more copy than you will be able to break down in in a long time in years. So, don't worry about that. But for now, just do do these five. And so, what I want you to do is is to pause the video and I want you to, you know, use different colors to break down what's going on in this old hands of sales page. So, this sales page has a lot of good like pain. Um, it's for a kind of a younger audience, a little more emotional. So, there's there's a lot of pain going on here for whoever wrote this. And, uh, I want you guys to try to figure out where is he doing this. Use red, use orange, use green, and then I want you to unpause the video. We'll come back here and I'll break it down with you. But, like I just uh had in my sorry for my rant. Actually, I'm not sorry because I feel like some people probably needed that. But, in the rant that I just had, right, take some freaking action, dude. If you're at work, if you're doing whatever and you can't take action right now, then don't even don't even continue because once I break this down, you can't unsee it. I want you to pause the video whenever you have time, which should better be freaking today cuz we all got the same amount of time. You all got 24 hours. It's your choice what you do with it ultimately. So, break this sucker down. Come back here and we'll go through it together and we'll see we'll see how you did and uh it'll be dope. So, let's do it. Number one, first thing I want to do is I want to go through the whole page looking for red. So pain of inaction. So where is he increasing the pain of us not doing anything? Where is he turning up the heat on that stove? Let me get a smaller thing there. All right. Transform into a modern day Adonis. So we're doing that here. Uh he's using the language that his audience will understand. So no one's going to hit this page who's not seen him on YouTube. and he uses this Adonis as a word bucket to kind of associate with their dream outcome. So by saying modern day Adonis there, his audience is thinking about this dream outcome that they want. So being the giga Chad and having a sharp jawline and being muscular and whatever else you do from being an Adonis and build a 3K month business in six months or less guaranteed. So here we have 3K month business because they don't have that. This is painful. It's it's a little bit like indirect, right? He's saying, you know, you can build this. He's not going too emotional here, but you know, here we go. Uh let's see. Pain, it's time for you to leave all the Jeffrey behind here. We have some pain going on. So Jeff is kind of like the opposite of Adonis. So what what Hamza did is he kind of created this like negative and positive angle to associate with his audience for their current situations and their their dream outcomes. So, no one wants to be a Jeffrey and every everyone of his audience knows what a Jeffrey is. Um, but everyone wants to be an Adonis. And so, by saying you're going to be an Adonis, you're going to leave the Jeffrey behind. We're creating the pain of an action if they don't do this. Okay. Transform your world with Adonis School. The only program designed to improve every aspect of your life. Okay. So, here we have like a little bit going on here. I'm not a huge fan of this headline. Um, transform your world is kind of like vague, but improve every aspect of your life. There's a little bit of, you know, little bit of pain of an action going there. You're out to leave all the Jeffrey behind. Okay. Dream outcome. This is your secret advantage. It will set you apart from everyone else. Status pain of an action. Whatever else is getting mindlessly consuming TikTok, still watching bad things, getting ready to work a crappy normal job. Um, you'll be leveling up. So here we're literally going from like massive negative to positive. So this is all pain in action, right? He's saying while everyone else is having the worst life ever, you I wish I should have I should have censored that out earlier. Oops. Um you'll be leveling up fast. Imagine actually making real progress as an entrepreneur. Freick. Am I going have to censor this in the video? I probably will. God damn it. Hands off. Imagine actually making real progress as an entrepreneur. Okay, so once again, pain of inaction. First, you start making little bits of money here and there. Then soon before you realize you're literally making more than your parents, uh you you improve to new clothes. You can afford haircuts or you can travel. Okay, this is all look at what he's doing here. This is an entire section of copy doing nothing but painting the positive dream outcome which creates this pain of inaction of them doing nothing by him saying look you can buy the latest MacBook without even blinking upping your game boosting your work hustle you feel pain because right now you can't buy the latest MacBook right so once again here we're using pictures imagine yourself stepping into a realm where the actions command respect Okay, look at what he's doing here. What is he targeting? Status, right? Pain in action. I've had an amazing life-changing experience. Okay, here he's going into storytelling. He's talking about the dream outcomes that you guys want to do. Then he talks about how it makes him feel pain in action. You work for your own hours while wearing a bathrobe. Lol. Here we we're gaining confidence in him as well. So, we'll go over that in a second. Um, never have to commute to work again. What is this nightmare sit nightmare scenario? You know, it's within your grasp. Cool. Here we're like talking about the mechanism support. We'll go over that in a second, but cool. Your life as a modern day Adonis. What is he doing here? He's painting the future scenario. All of this, this is like, yeah, this whole sales page, literally the whole start of it is just nothing but pain of an action,

4. Pain-Confidence

showing you positive and negative scenarios. He's helping you run towards the light and run away from the darkness. You're running towards Adonis. You're running away from being a Jeffrey. And he's showing you how that feels, how it felt for him, how it's going to feel for you. Very emotional. How does this Adonis offer work? Um, okay. So, this is really some more of confidence stuff. We'll keep going. Little bit more confidence. Uh, getting clients, what skills you need. You guys should be breaking this in more depth than I am, but you know, I'm on a clock here. So, we'll explore how to not just reach maintain. We'll touch aspects. Okay, so not a whole lot of emotion going on here. Uh, just a lot of just kind of systems proof, optimize testosterone, powerful network, how to make genuine friends, accountability partner. Okay. Yeah. All right. Cool. Join Adonis Adonis Adonis school today. Here we have meet your coaches. Um, here we're paying him in action because he's talking about how he's just like you. He felt this painful situation. This is story selling by telling his story that matches where you're at now versus where you want to go. Um, your emotions are height and you want to do what he did, which is Adonis school. Here we have all these coaches. YouTube wins. Um, okay. It's Brandon Brothers committed the best version of himself. here. He's targeting that community hard. This is something that I think is really cool that Hamza did uh is he really focuses on on the tribe. He sells you on this. He's targeting this, right? He's targeting the pain of you not having love and belonging. You don't have friendship, intimacy with with brothers, uh you don't have family, a sense of connection. He's targeting that here uh in this right there. Pretty cool. This is what we're all about. Frequently asked questions. Okay, so that's kind of the pain of an action. Obviously, it's really front-loaded because like we said, you know, you want to increase the pain and then ascribe that pain to a problem and then show them confidence. So, that's exactly what he's doing on this page. Let's go ahead to the pain of action. How does he make it sound easy? How does he make it super easy? All right, let's take a look. U very soon before you even realize. So, that sounds like easy. Improve your life. if you can finally afford this. Uh, not a whole lot of easy really just pain of an action here. Command respect. Okay. Work your own hours. This has a little bit of a little bit of pain of an action by saying like you don't you can just wear a bathrobe. You don't need a ball. So that makes it sound easy. A little bit less effort left less effort. Um, okay. done his school work. This is really by doing the whole pro like so I won't break down every single one of these. It'll take a while. But look, look at how he's doing here. It's like we will help you identify the bad stuff that's taking up your brain points. We'll show you how to use this. We'll help you by saying wheel. He's he's helping it seem like it's easier. It's closer to just pushing a button than it is you doing a bunch of work. And this is what this whole section does. So, look at this. Look at this. How does he offer work? We'll give you a 90-day protocol which lays out simple steps for you to follow so you can take action. So, making that pain of action decrease, making it like a push button, you get the thing that you want. He's doing out this throughout the whole thing. So, he's just literally showing you how we will help you do all of this. So, this is kind of really the pain of this is how he's decreasing the pain of action. Um, so now we'll go on to the confidence. So, how does he increase that? you know what this is? You're you're going to be a you're going to be able to do this. You should trust me. All this stuff. So, here we have a little bit of that going on here by him showing pictures of of his life and where he's at. Um here we have confidence in him by he's telling his story. Um here's some more proof of him just showing you like, hey, I'm really living what I'm telling you. Here's me doing whatever. Here's me making a ton of money. Uh once again, more proof here using the same pictures. How does it work? This gives you confidence because this is like systems proof. So all of this is us being like, "Okay, wow. If I thought this wasn't legit, I'm rethinking that because I'm seeing all of this stuff that he's doing and I see the proof that he has." Here we have the wall of confidence. So by all these people getting you tons of um showing them how they're making money. So if other people are doing it, so can you. Uh yeah, going over this stuff. Cool. Meet your coaches. Uh this is confidence from here because this dude's just like jacked. So if he's going to teach you fitness stuff, then that's showing giving you confidence. Agency codes. We have more YouTube wins. Simple stuff there. Uh global network. this. So, this is actually a really big part of of confidence because what he's doing is he's showing you like look at how many other people bought this thing and that's social proof. And so, if you're seeing that all these people around the world bought this, you want to base your decision off of them to save mental energy. So, you're like, you know what, they thought it was a good idea, so it must be I'll buy it. I'll check it out. Especially if it's all across the world. Here we have uh frequency frequently asked questions which just boosts the confidence. Um, yeah, and he's being specific here. So, it's specifically designed for young men looking to scale their business, make a lot of money, and become a lethal masculine man along way. So, he's using language that really adds to confidence that he knows who he's talking to and he can help you. And there's a lot of confidence in this top part as well by how specific he is, by nailing exactly what you want and by showing you how he's done exactly what you want specifically. He doesn't just say like, "Hey, I'm going to make your life better." No, he goes into, "You're about to leave these Jeffreies behind. All these things you were struggling with, you're not going to struggle with them anymore." All this good stuff. And um yeah, that specificity leads to confidence. So, that's how we do it. That's how you break it down. And by doing this, you gain understanding. You start to see why stuff works. And when you learn how stuff works, you know how to create things that will work for you. That's the magic. So, I want you to do is I got lots of bullets. I got emails. I got sales pages and all this. Um, like I said, 200 plus pieces of good copy coming soon for examples, but for now, five is more than enough to get you started for this. Oh, my camera just glitched.

4. Pain-Confidence

Anyways, hopefully uh this recording didn't just screw up. Should be good, though. But that's it. So, I want you to go through these, you know, every day, find more copy. There's tons of databases in Copy Lee already. Like, we've got like thousands of pieces of copy for you to study, but I'll put together a new bank for this last module soon and put it in mural for you. But yeah, that's what you do guys. That is the study part. So you just do that. Like that took what 15 minutes. Obviously you want to go in more detail than I did, but you get the point. Not hard. It's fun. So like we've discussed, this takes practice, but once you learn how to stir pain, you can become a profit spawning machine because that pain leads to the actions you want them to take. And if they take action, they change their life. If they change their life, that's valuable. And that value is tradable for money. That's how you make money, by helping others. So, you unlock the ability to hook your target audience, keep them engaged, and keep them feeling emotions in your copy, and that will motivate them to take action. So, good stuff. Congrats. We're finishing the module, pat yourself on the back, take a break, get some water. Um, quick reminder before the next module. Um, if you like these modules and you want me to crank more modules out like this one and even better, please let me know any wins, any mental breakthroughs, any like thoughts you have on this module or the course in general inside the course wins channel in the Discord. Um, just to be completely honest, it just gives me energy. Like making stuff is not easy. Uh, I love it. I chose this path and I'm paid well for it, so I'm not complaining at all. I love this. But when I see the wins from you guys of talking about how much these things have helped you, how much it means to you or how this has changed, you know, your life or you've made more money from this, it just gives me energy to push through the sticking points, the times where it's hard and I got to figure out how all this stuff fits together and make it into a concise module. Anyways, just know that I love you guys and I appreciate you whether you like this or not. I appreciate you for checking it out and uh if you do like it, let me know because it'll help me make even more modules that will change your life even more. So, I love y'all. I'll see you in the next module.
