WARNING: This should ONLY be used if you are just getting started in a niche. Nothing and I mean NOTHING will replace your ability to critically think through these questions. Your understanding of the niche will be the FOUNDATION of EVERYTHING you write. Do not outsource this or you will fail over time.

That being said, this can be a great way to get a quick and decent understanding of a brand-new audience.

Prompt

Hi, I'm writing emotionally-driven marketing copy for [your niche]. Please act as an expert direct response marketer and fill in the following customer research questions as if you had studied this market in depth — pulling from actual market language, common beliefs, pain points, and emotional drivers. Please give me specific, concrete answers, and avoid fluff or vague answers. Think like someone building a sales page or VSL that needs to convert skeptics into buyers. Here are the questions:

SECTION 1 | MACRO AIM Audience/Niche (Who): How can you easily describe the people you're targeting? How do they label themselves? (Helps if it 'sounds' specific but is actually broad.) Purpose (Why): What are their main driving forces? Use 'Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs' if you need help. Goal (What): What is their big goal? What 'Method' are they trying to achieve their 'Purpose' with? What is the problem that they think will 'change everything' if they solve it?

SECTION 2 | THE PAINFUL DETAILS (the most powerful 3-5 for each) Current Situation (Negative): What is going on in their current day-to-day life? Think more literally. Focus on condition scalability, what is the most true for the majority of your audience. What do they spend their time doing? What is happening that they feel like they can't overcome/escape? Dream Situation (Positive): What do they want their future life to look like? Whose lifestyle do they envy? What do they want to spend their time doing? Pain Points (Negative): How do they FEEL about the painful things in their current situation? Think emotionally for these. What specific words trigger painful emotions for your audience? Desire Points (Positive): How do they WANT TO FEEL about the things they desire in their dream situation? Think emotionally for these. What specific words trigger deep desire in your audience?

SECTION 3 | BELIEFS (add as many as possible, but keep them ranked in order of importance) Method False Beliefs: What are all the reasons/excuses they think the method doesn't work? Why do they think the method sucks? Internal False Beliefs: What are all the reasons/excuses they think they can't make the method work? Why do they think they suck? External False Beliefs: What are all the reasons/excuses they think that the 'world' won't allow them and the method to work? Why do they think the world/environment that they and the method are in sucks? Perceived Micro-Problems: In their opinion, why haven't they been able to achieve the 'Method' or solve the big problem they've been trying to solve? What do they consider to be the most painful 'micro-problems' inside the big problem? If you were to make a course to be the bridge from where they are now to getting their dream outcome, what would be the small problems they'd have to solve to get there?
